The Universidad Nacional de Entre Ríos, UNER, is 33 years old being created in 1973 by Decree Law 20366 within a framework of decentralization and regionalization of the national university system.

In 1983, after the last military dictatorship the UNER becomes an open and pluralist institution through an academic excellence oriented policy. Back then, the university offered eight bachelor’s degrees and had about 2000 students. Since its creation, the UNER has strengthened its academic offer, making it possible for over 12500 students to attend its many academic units. The faculty is involved in research activities as well as in articulation and transference programs and projects at provincial level.

The University’s Rectorate is in Concepción del Uruguay and it has nine academic units in the cities of Paraná, Concepción del Uruguay, Oro Verde, Gualeguaychú, Concordia y Villaguay. The UNER is organized under the system of schools or faculties: They are Facultad de Ciencias de la Administración (Faculty of Administration Sciences), Facultad de Ciencias Agropecuarias (Faculty of Agricultural Sciences), Facultad de Ciencias de la Alimentación (Faculty of Food Sciences), Facultad de Bromatología (Faculty of Bromatology), Facultad de Ciencias Económicas (Faculty of Economical Sciences), Facultad de Ciencias de la Educación (Faculty of Educational Sciences), Facultad de Ingeniería (Faculty of Engineering), Facultad de Ciencias de la Salud (Faculty of Health Sciences) and Facultad de Trabajo Social (Faculty of Social Work). THE FACULTY OF SOCIAL WORK

Our faculty starts as Entre Ríos Social Service School in 1960 within a context of State promoted social policies development, which requested the training of professionals in the social field.
It becomes Faculty of Social Service in 1986, the first academic unit at this university level in the country. In 1994, it is renamed as Faculty of Social Work as the result of a change in its professional conception.

Since then, our faculty has institutionally consolidated its position and placed itself ahead of disciplinary debate both nationwide and in Latin America.

As regards postgraduate studies, the Master in Mental Health program was created in 1992, the first master’s program at Universidad Nacional de Entre Ríos, followed 8 years later by the Master in Social Work program. In order to strengthen the university postgraduate academic policy, the PhD in Social Sciences is initiated in 2007 this degree is run together with Faculty of Educational Sciences and Faculty of Economical Sciences. All three programs impact greatly upon the training of professional graduates in the area and country.

After a long tradition of excellence in the Bachelor’s Degree in Social Work and accounting for an institutional policy of continuous growth, the Bachelor’s degree in Political Science is created in 2004.

Nowadays, a strong emphasis is placed on Extension and Research project development realized in many programs committed to the provincial and national reality.

We work strongly convinced that it is the University’s task to train critical thinking professionals capable of recognizing deep historic inequities. Consequently, our graduates are potential strategic actors to promote proposals for social change.

Forty years after our faculty creation and with more than a thousand graduate students from our bachelor’s degrees and over fifty Master’s graduates, we continue to have a public university conception oriented by our sense of social function, capable of knowing and understanding reality and thinking practices based on inclusion, freedom and justice values.

In order to stay and study in Argentina, whether it is a short course or internship, it is important to bear in mind the differences in academic calendar, which may be a problem when taking annual courses in the country of origin.

Moreover, it is essential to comply with the requisites established by the Migrations and Education authorities:

When deciding to apply for a student exchange program, enroll at a college for a degree or postgraduate studies, you should contact the nearest consulate of Argentina and find out about all the necessary requirements, documentation and visa processing. If you wish to enroll for a bachelor's degree or postgraduate study which grants a diploma, ask the authorities in the country of origin. If you only want to take some courses instead, you should ask about the current agreements between both universities.

People entering Argentina as temporary visitors, regardless of their country of origin, are able to attend Argentinean Universities as long as they remain for the period granted by the Argentine immigration officer at the time of entry (typically 60-180 days). Travelers in this category who wish to overstay will have different requirements whether they come from a Mercosur country or not. In either case, contact the Argentinean consulate.
